LAST ASSAULT.

Japs Are Having More Trouble Than Expected.

Russians Are Hopeful of Holding Out Indefinitely—Cruisers Safe.

Che Foo, Aug. 22.—The latest reports received at Che Foo indicate that the Japanese attack on Port Arthur has not been successful, but that fighting is still in progress. The Japanese are making what they call the final assault all along the line and claim that the city will be in their possession in a few days. The Japanese have occupied An-shan-shan, driving a part of the Russian forces toward Mokden, but the heavy rains are still interfering with the Manchurian campaign. It is reported that the Russian war vessels Novik and Diana, missing since the Port Arthur fight of August 10, have landed safely in Russian ports. Russia has called out large forces of reserves to be sent to the scene of war.

Sunday's Developments.
Russia's refusal to observe the laws of neutrality has brought about a strained situation at Shanghai. The cruiser Askold and a smaller vessel are still there, despite China's orders to leave, and yesterday a Japanese torpedo boat entered the harbor. Before she could reach the Askold, which is in dock, the United States torpedo boat destroyer Chancey placed herself between the two warships preventing any attempt at hostilities. A fleet of Japanese war vessels is outside the harbor. The Taotai of Shanghai has declared he cannot protect the foreign interests because of Russia's action and has called upon United States Consul General Goodnow to aid him. Consul Goodnow has called a meeting of the foreign consuls for today. The Russian cruiser Novik, which has displayed such wonderful activity, was defeated and stranded yesterday by two Japanese cruisers. The Japanese are said to have captured the northernmost fort of the inner line of the Russian defenses at Port Arthur.

HAD TO HURRY

But He Got Off The Track in Time.

Ed Forbes, of Larkin had a narrow escape at the L. & N. depot Saturday afternoon. He was crossing the railroad with an express wagon loaded with groceries and seeing the train close at hand, he whipped up his horse with such speed that the wagon was turned over after it cleared the track. Forbes was caught under the load and seriously injured. He sustained a severe gash on his forehead, which a physician had to sew up.

JOHN BOYD

Purchases Farm of Esq. S. G. Buckner, South of Town.

Jailer John Boyd has bought Mr. S. G. Buckner's farm on the Beverly pike, a very desirable little farm a few miles from town. The price was about $6,000. Mr. Boyd will move to it at the expiration of his official term.

None Too Soon.

Mr. Walter Knight and his two sisters have returned from St. Louis. They narrowly escaped being in the path of the balloon-shaped cyclone of Friday. They were on a street car and the motor man increased his speed and passed out of the danger just ahead of the storm, which a moment more crossed the track behind them.

Patient Dead.

Miss Sallie Ferguson, a patient from Graves county, died Sunday at the Asylum. The remains were shipped to Mayfield yesterday.

RELIC OF WAR.

Historic Weapon Restored to Daughter of Gen. Ross.

A Confederate Officer Who Was Killed While a Prisoner and Attempting to Escape.

Mrs. Joseph Killbrew, of Montgomery county, Tenn., was in Hopkinsville a few days ago on an errand that calls up memories of more than 41 years ago. She came to receive from Judge W. P. Winfree a sabre that was the property of her father, Brig. Gen. Reuben Ross, who was killed in this county in 1862 or 1863.

Ross was a colonel in the Confederate army and while temporarily detached from his command was in and around Hopkinsville. While here he received his commission as Brigadier General and it was found in his pocket when he was mortally wounded two weeks later. The night before this happened he attended a party in Hopkinsville and escorted Miss Bradshaw, now Mrs. W. P. Winfree, to the party. The next day he went into North Christian. That country was filled with Unionists, and some of them informed two first-lieutenant Union soldiers of his presence in the neighborhood. One of these soldiers now lives in this city. They came upon him unexpectedly and captured him. After disarming him, they made preparations to take him to federal headquarters as a prisoner. While they were in the act of mounting horses for the trip, Ross suddenly grabbed one of his captives and while attempting to snatch a pistol from his belt, the other soldier brained him with the butt of his gun. In a desperate condition Ross was brought to town and taken to Mrs. Watt's residence, where he received surgical attention, but his skull was crushed and he died a few days later from the blow.

This sabre he wore was taken care of by Miss Bradshaw, who being related to him, called at his boarding house. After the war closed she became the wife of Judge Winfree, a Confederate soldier and comrade of the dead man, and they have carefully preserved the sabre for more than 40 years.

Mrs. Killbrew is a daughter of Gen. Ross, whose home is in Montgomery county, Tenn. Judge Winfree not long ago met her and told her of the weapon and invited her to come over and make his family a visit and get it. This she has done.

Gen. Ross was a grandson of the noted preacher of the same name. He is well remembered by many of our older citizens. He was a gallant soldier, noted for his reckless bravery and desperate disregard of danger. Once before he was taken a prisoner and while on the way to a federal prison jumped from a train moving at full speed and escaped with such slight injuries that he rejoined his regiment not long afterwards. At the time he received his death wound, he forced his captors to act on the defensive to save their own lives. The death he had so often courted came to him from his own recklessness.

OLD PHONES

Are Being Listed as New Ones, Says Mr. Hoge.

Manager Hoge, of the Home Telephone Co., says complaints have come to his office that several of his subscribers have had their directors abstracted.

He says an agent of the Cumberland told him that a great objection to the automatic service was that no call could be made in the absence of a directory, whereas a Cumberland subscriber could request central to connect by name. Mr. Hoge says it is proper to warn his subscribers to watch their directories, but if any subscriber's book has disappeared he will supply another. Call 1111 or 1444. He further says the list of 32 alleged new subscribers published by the Cumberland as having been put on since Aug. 1, contains the names of at least 6 who were on the directory issued several months ago. Others are outside of town and several are duplicated.

The Home Company has put in 27 more new ones since August 1 and others will be put in as soon as they can be reached by the workmen.

BULLETS WHISTLED

As the Preacher Left Rich Redd's House.

A colored bartender named Rich Redd, when he returned home Saturday night, it is said, found a colored preacher named Jones in a room with his wife under circumstances that convinced him that the minister was not making a pastoral call. Redd opened fire as the preacher leaped from a window and fled with such precipitancy that a barbed-wire fence proved to be only a temporary obstacle. The preacher sustained some scratches, either from flying bullets or barbed wires, he doesn't know which.

Two hundred feet in length and almost half as much in width, the elevator rose in a mild and lofty feet in the air. Through two large doors in the ends ran railroad trucks, leading through the base of the building. Near the wooden one-story office, snugly close to its immense neighbor, a dizzy ladder of steel rungs, riveted to the side of the elevator, led straight up to the roof.

To the north stretched the business portion of the city; to the south the glittering harbor unrolled its broad expanse. Hundreds of cars stood in the adjoining freight yard; and at the docks below three long, black ocean liners, with funnels banded red and white, snored drowsily through their steam pipes, while into their yawning holds the grain was poured by exhaustless spouts.

Archie Braithwait was a student at a business college in the city. His spare time was largely spent in getting an idea of the different industries of the place.

On Wednesday and Saturday afternoons he had recitations, and in these half-days he looked forward with much pleasure. He had already visited the electric light plants, the pottery, a shoe factory and the rolling mills.

The elevator came next on his schedule. Every morning when he went down to his work, he saw across a half-mile of lower roofs the colossal structure against the eastern sky.

Suggestive of great transactions it fascinated the young man, and it was with considerable satisfaction that at last, one Saturday afternoon, he found himself in the shadow of the building with a pass from its superintendent, entitling him the freedom of the plant.

Before entering the elevator he stood for a few minutes, taking in the details outside. The huge steel ships, stretching their ponderous length so peacefully in the muddy docks; the high, sharp-booms, with their columns of white draft marks; the sailors swung on dangling stages, painting the iron sides; the shouts of the stevedores—all combined to make the scene fascinating.

But time was passing. Braithwait, tired reluctantly from the what was, and passing through the red-lit dock, passed into the freight yard, a pump from front door on the spoked wheels, entered the door of the elevator.

The next two hours were of absorbing interest. He explored the place from top to bottom, and the only thing that was done to the grain from the time it was taken from the cars until it was loaded on the stevedores.

Few men were in sight, and no one seemed to be in a hurry. Every body was too busy to be curious, and apparently took it for granted that any stranger in the building had good reason for being there.

It was a cold building. Sudden drafts swooped down from unexpected quarters. The air was filled with fine powder, which strewed the floors. Dusty electric bulbs lighted the semi-darkness. Speaking tubes ran here and there.

There was a sound of rushing water; the floors shook with the rumble of machinery. By pressing a button he found a lever all those automatic processes could be modified in a twinkling.

In the course of his exploration Braithwait came to the "spout floor," packed with numerous large round holes. Here great funnel-shaped spouts of iron conveyed the grain from the gannets above to the bins beneath these holes. Some were fitted with round covers. Some of the covers were thrown out entirely back; and Braithwait, at an angle of more than 120 degrees, was held up by a strong beam. The student moved quickly to the floor, for he had no way of knowing the depth of the hole. He stepped over the edge, and found himself 150 feet above the ground. He paid no attention to the fact that he was 150 feet above the ground.

At the end of the floor was a small, round, stick propped against the wall. The boards beneath it were just covered figures, its top was 77.

stepped down to peer within. Other blackness met his gaze. How it happened he cannot tell to this day, but as he rose again his foot slid along the slippery floor, and he shot downward into the pit.

As he passed through the opening he made an ineffectual grasp at its edge, but instead struck the stick that held the cover up. Down it came, and while he still hung suspended in mid-air all light from above was blotted out, and he was left in total darkness. The terrible sensation of falling that unknown distance he will never forget. How far beneath him was the grain? It might be ten, twenty, thirty, forty feet. Perhaps the bin contained no grain at all, in which event he had fallen sixty feet before his bones were shattered on the hard timbers. These ideas passed like lightning through his brain. Then with a shock the motion ceased. He had fallen head first, but turned a half-somersault on his way down, alighting up to his knees in a yielding substance that broke the shock of his fall. He found afterward that the substance could not have been more than twenty feet, but the total strangeness of the place, and the total uncertainty as to when and where he would bring up made it seem three times as great.

Braithwait's first feeling was one of thankfulness that none of his bones were broken. With his thumb and forefinger he tried the substance into which he had fallen. The kernels were small and elliptical, and he knew that he was in a bin of wheat. It was absolutely dark; but the faintest gleam from an unseen reflected the Egyptian darkness. The air was dry and free from dust, and the odor of the grain was not unpleasant. The young man did not realize at first that he was in a position of any peril. He felt annoyed and angry with himself for being so careless. But it was useless to stand idle, blaming himself for something that had passed. The thing was to get back to the floor, but how?

Might there not be a ladder on the side of the bin? Braithwait felt his way round the walls, but discovered none. The investigation showed him that his prison was square, with a side of about fifteen feet. He could feel the timbers quiver with the vibration from the machinery. Deadend sounds came to him from without; he heard the muffled whistle of a locomotive in the adjoining freight yard. Could he make noise enough to attract the attention of the workers on the floor above?

For two or three minutes he shouted at the top of his lungs, filling the bin with clamorous cries, but the closed trap kept the men from hearing him. Then with sickening force came a sense of his peril that left him weak and faint. What if they should begin to draw off the wheat before he could get out? He would surely be smothered in the sinking mass.

The thought roused him like a knife-stab. Round and round the bin he hurried, slumping deep in the grain with every step, feeling in vain along the smooth walls for something to which he might cling. With clenched fists he hammered on the wood, hoping that some one would hear the sound and understand his danger. But his blows, directed by the reverberation of the machinery, were no more and louder outside than the steps of a fly on a window pane.

Terror seized him. He felt himself in the grasp of an automatic monster. To that heartless mechanism he was no more than one of the innumerable grains which it was his function to store and deliver at the bidding of its masters.

He was standing near the middle of the bin when the thing he dreaded happened. Beneath his feet came a shifting, sliding motion, and the surface sank a little, just the slightest bit; but he could not have been more appalled had the solid ground been suddenly torn from under him. They were drawing off the wheat through the open hatch at the bottom! Before he knew it he had sunk above his ankles. He heaved away again, the beachers' center, and bowled himself back into one of the corners.

the summit by particles from the sides sliding into the cavity.

If one has some grain larger than the others, long for a time on the edge of the vortex until the supporting grains fall away from under it and it rolls down the slope to disappear in the central quick sand, one will understand the peril that threatened Braithwait. Once let him be dragged within the influence of the suction, and nothing could save him from being buried alive in the smothering grain.

The student never thought harder or faster than he did during the next few seconds. All was quiet in the bin save for the soft sliding of the myriad kernels toward the invisible depression in the center. He realized clearly the only course which held out the least hope of safety. Throwing off his overcoat he tossed it aside in the blackness. Then with hands and feet he began to scoop the grain away from his corner and push it toward the center. The cavity thus made gave him a brief respite, until the sinking of its wall set him to digging desperately again.

Thus he fought and struggled in the blackness, until after fatigue overcame him. His muscles ached almost to numbness. His breath came short. He was drenched with perspiration. But there was no cessation in the movement of the grain. Slowly it gained upon him as he made his losing fight. The horror of the death that impended goaded him to extreme efforts, but his diminished strength could not cope with the steady sinking of the wheat oil, if they would only close the spout below!

The catastrophe, long averted, came at last. The edge crumbled beneath his feet; he slipped, staggered, fell! Down the steep slope he rolled, madly trying to check his progress by thrusting his arms and legs into the yielding mass; but to no avail. His hands grasped only the sliding kernels.

In a moment he was above the central vortex. Wild with terror, he put forth the most desperate efforts to climb the sides of the pit. Again and again he seemed to be in a fair way to regain the top; but each time, after he had crept up a little distance, the grain would slip beneath him, carrying him back to the bottom. The moment came at last when he could not free his ankles from the clutch of the grain. Down he sank in the quagmire, lower—lower—lower! A resistless power beneath seemed to be grasping his feet in a clutch that neither increased nor loosened. There was something terrible about its sameness.

Now the grain reached his knees, now it was half-way up his thighs, now he was buried to the waist. Higher and higher it crept, until it was close under his temples. In a convulsion of despair he threw his head, and he would die horribly under the choking kernels.

But help came to Braithwait just as all hope was leaving him. Heavy steps shuffled along the floor overhead. The sinking man realized that it was his last opportunity, and cry after cry burst from his lips.

His shouts were heard. The steps halted for a moment, then the cover above was flung suddenly back, admitting the first light that had reached the prisoner's eyes since he had fallen through the opening and the trap had clanged shut. A red face, with bristling dusty-white mustache, peered into the blackness of the bin.

The wheat was sliding over Braithwait's shoulders as he uttered one last hoarse, inarticulate cry. The man above could see nothing, but he understood; and his quick understanding was the sinking student's salvation.

Braithwait heard him run along the floor to a speaking tube, and guessed that the order to stop the flow of wheat was being given. Then all at once the motion beneath his feet ceased, and he knew that he was saved.

Lynch Law Runs Rampant

And Terror Reigns

at Statesboro.

Statesboro, Ga., Aug. 17.—With clothing saturated with kerosene, writing and twining in their agony, screaming to Heaven for the mercy that the mob would not show, Paul Reed and Will Cato, negroes, two of the principals in the dastardly murder and burning of Henry Hodges and wife and three of their children, six miles from Statesboro, three weeks ago, were burned at the stake yesterday.

At 1.20 o'clock a determined mob charged upon the court house, overpowering the military guard, seized Cato and Reed, who had been found guilty after a legal trial, and sentenced to be hanged, took them

two miles from Statesboro and there executed their fearful penalty.

Nobody's match was applied to the necks of those in front, and

Reed begged not to tell the truth about his deed.

"Yes sir. I killed Mr. and Mrs.

Hodges."

"Who killed the children?" he was asked.

"Handy Bell," came the response as the flames leaped upward, and further questioning was impossible for the wild tumult. As the flames leaped about Reed's naked body, with oil-soaked skin, he twisted his head around in an endeavor to choke himself and escape the fearful torture. Only once did he complain. He said: "Lord have mercy."

Cato screamed in agony, and begged to be shot. His heavy hair which was oil-soaked, was almost the first thing the flames fastened on, and screaming with agony

while the hemp rope became a collar of fire around his neck, a thrill of horror ran through the frames of the more timid. Before the flames had quenched Cato's life the rope was burned into and his head swung from side to side as he endeavored to avoid the fiery tongues.

Others Shot to Death.

Handy Bell, who was discharged from jail yesterday on account of lack of evidence, was shot to death

last night. When he was released from custody he left the city, going in a direction opposite from his home. He was followed by fifteen armed men, who kept him in sight

until he was well into the country, where they overtook him and killed him with bullets. One negro was found dead by the road in five miles east of the town. The body pierced by two Winchester bullets; two negroes, one of them

"old-time darkies" and his son, teen-year-old son, shot in the cabin during the late hours of last night by unknown marauders; a dozen cases of flogging, which are of nightly occurrence, too frequent to excite more than passing notice—such was the history of the day.

New Orleans won the fight for the next encampment of the Supreme Lodge Knights of Pythias, defeating Nashville by a vote of 99 to 41. Nashville was sore over defeat, one of the Nashville papers offering this explanation:

"Some were unscharitable enough to declare that the increased mileage which would accrue to the Supreme Representatives by meeting in New Orleans was the lever that brought the votes to that city, nearly all of them traveling hundreds of miles further on passes or reduced rates, while being paid above the regular passenger rate by the supreme body."

In the election held at Mayfield Saturday, the local option side won over the saloon element by a vote of 533 to 267, making a majority of nearly two to one. The vote was the largest that has been polled in Mayfield in many years. The whole of every mill and factory was put into operation Saturday night, which resulted in more noise than on New Year's eve. There has not been a saloon in Mayfield for thirty years.

September wheat went wild at Minneapolis and reached $1.23 Saturday. At Chicago reports of lower temperature in the northwest with continued sensational accounts of rust damage throughout the spring wheat section, caused a further wild advance. However, the rush from profit taking forced the cereal down amid some of the wildest scenes ever witnessed on the Chicago board of trade.

John M. Meloon has become managing editor of the Paducah News-Democrat, succeeding Irvin Cobb. Mack is one of the brightest newspaper men in the State and this change puts him in a position that will bring out the good points in him. He will make Urey Woodson just the kind of an assistant he needs in his Paducah office.

Even must be Godfrey Hunter's lucky number. In the 11th district 11 members of the district committee met and ignored Edwards' majority of 1100 and declared Hunter nominated by about 111 votes. His 11 however is not the kind that leaves the whole lump and the end is not yet.

Seebree business men inaugurated "a watermelon contest" last week, offering $15 in prizes for the best melons. There were 25 entries. Messrs. B. F. Jewell, W. J. Smith and T. L. Wilson were the tasting committee. The awards were made by number, after which the crowd was turned loose on the exhibits, which soon disappeared. J. M. Hall won first prize. W. F. Ashby second and Springfield & Beyner third.

BOY FOUND.

Robert Torian, Missing Kid, Located in the Country.

Robert Torian, the nine-year-old son of R. E. Torian, a commission merchant of 206 South Second street, was found Saturday night. The boy had been missing since Friday morning. He was located by his father on a farm several miles from Paducah.

Early Friday morning the lad was sent with some eggs for the Lagomarsino hotel. He collected for them and left. When he returned his father reported his disappearance at the police station. The city was searched but without result. Mr. Torian learned Saturday night of his son's whereabouts. He was returned home at once.—Paducah News-Democrat.

MR. J. S. WILLIAMS

Proprietor of Huffman's Mill, Victim of Bright's Disease.

Mr. J. S. Williams, the miller who for the last year or two has been operating Huffman's Mill, South of town, died Friday afternoon of Bright's disease of the kidneys. Mr. Williams came to this county from Ohio county, which county he formerly represented in the House of Representatives of the Kentucky General Assembly. He had made many friends by his upright dealings and gentlemanly bearing since he came to Christian county, and his death occasions general regret and sorrow. Mr. Williams was 59 years of age.

NOW CLARKSVILLE.

Two Out of Three Games Taken From Paducah.

Monday's Game a Piercely Contested Struggle of Ten Innings.

Hopkinsville was defeated by Cairo three straight, one day sustaining a shut out with Morris in the box. From Cairo the Browns went to Paducah and succeeded in taking two out of three games. On Friday, with Pettifer and Keller as battery, they shut out Paducah 4 to 0, playing an errorless game with six hits, while Paducah made 4 hits and 8 errors.

Saturday the Browns went to pieces, or rather the Paducah Indians struck a streak of batting luck and hit two pitchers unmercifully. Alexander was hit 7 times and knocked out of the box in the second inning. Ferrell came next and 9 hits were made off him. Paducah, after a shut out the day before, piled up 10 scores, while Hopkinsville with difficulty made 4. There were two errors.

Sunday there was an exciting game of ten innings with Morris in the box. It resulted Hopkinsville 7, Paducah 5, although Honno struck out 15 men. Hopkinsville made 10 hits and 4 errors and Paducah 9 hits and 4 errors.

The Browns came home Sunday night and left yesterday for three games at Clarksville and will play three more before beginning Thursday. This will be Clarksville's last appearance here and probably Friday a big delegation of Clarksville people will come over. One fare rates will obtain all this week, from either direction. Clarksville has just beat the champions two out of three and Hopkinsville will have to cut out errors if we get out of the series of six games with an even break.

Friday Cairo beat Clarksville 4 to 3. Saturday and Sunday Clarksville beat Cairo 7 to 2 and 6 to 4, played at Cairo.

Vincennes beat Henderson Friday 1 to 0. There was no game Saturday on account of rain. A double header was played at Vincennes Sunday. Vincennes took the first game 8 to 2 and Henderson the second, 2 to 1.

On The Fly.

A dispatch comes from Cairo to the effect that Pitcher Holycross, the heavy-hitting twirler for Cairo, has been sold to the New York Americans for $500. The money was paid Thursday at the close of the game with Hopkinsville, at Cairo.

Ralph Doll, with Clarksville, has succeeded Fleming as a pitcher for Evansville.

Cairo took three straight from the Browns, the last a shut out.

The league rules limit the payroll of each team to $300 a month. It is said Clarksville has increased its payroll to $1500. Cairo to $1200. Paducah $1200. Vincennes $1100. Henderson $950. Hopkinsville is the only team that is living up to the agreement.

Secretary Farnbaker has resigned and President Thompson is acting as secretary temporarily. He will be in this city today and it is understood that he will tender the position to a Hopkinsville man. The place pays $30 a month.

Hopkinsville has lost fourth place to Vincennes and the latter has a better chance to win from Clarksville. But anyhow we are ahead of Henderson.

The Paducah News-Democrat's new name for the Browns is Nut Students. Diagram, please.

Brady continues to get every fly that comes his way. Gilligan, Barlow and Marre led in hitting Saturday.

Paducah has put in a new catcher, a home youngster named Eddie Brahic.

Hopkinsville is trying to get Rogers, a pitcher who used to be with the team.

Gilligan and Alexander were both indisposed Sunday and on the bench. Moore played third, Brady short stop and Myers first base.

Bomar went to Clarksville yesterday to pitch the first game of a double series.

Peipho is playing first base for Clarksville and doing faultless work.

Left-fielder Harler, of Paducah, had his nose broken by a fly Saturday. The sun was in his eyes and blinded him. He will be laid up several days.

The official tables are being run wrong in all the papers of the league towns except Hopkinsville. President Thompson has agreed to furnish an official revision this week and see that they are put right.

Umpire Zinkins.

Umpire Zinkins is a good, conscientious umpire. He makes decisions that do not always please the fans, but he is in a better position to judge that right. He tries to umpire a game right, not to please anybody. Recently he became discouraged because of the "roast" of the fans, and wrote to league officials that he had tried to do right, and felt that from a standpoint of pleasing the patrons of the game, he felt that he had been a failure and wanted to resign. He was not allowed to, because the league officials recognized him as one of the best umpires possible to get. Fans should have some respect for the umpire. They should remember the sign in a western dancing hall: "Don't shoot the fiddler. He's doing his d—est."

STRIKE BEGUN

In Mines Of The United States Company at Sturgis.

Madisonville, Ky., Aug. 20.—A rather exciting report was received in this city last night when news was brought in that a strike had been inaugurated by the coal miners of the United States Mining Company, at Sturgis, Ky., in which some mine working two hundred men had closed down, and that if something was not done immediately to quell the trouble, men from the other mines would come out and join the strikers.

The trouble is over wages and "open shop" question. Superintendent Bucher, of the mining company, is very angry over the matter and says he will endeavor to work non-union men exclusively as soon as he can make arrangements to get the men imported into the town.

Rain.

(BY WILLIAM WILLIAMS HALL.)

We welcome thee, oh Rain!
Glad to see thee once again;
Thy absence from our land
Has caused everything much pain.

The corn was parched,
The ground was baked,
And the grass was sear,
But thou thirist hast slaked.

The grassy-brinked pond was dry,
The brook had ceased to flow,
But now the pond is filled
And the brook flows as before.

We thank thee, kind Providence,
That thou hast sent the rain,
To freshen our lands
And bring joy once again.

PARAGUAYAN REBELS

Seize Another Steamer With Officials on Board.

Excellence of Marksmanhip, Demonstrated by Insurgent Vessels Bombarding Asuncion.

Buenos Ayres, Aug. 19.—The insurgents have seized another steamer which had on board the Minister of War and a small escort. The Minister and his companions were made prisoners.

The vessel was towing four lighters loaded with 190 bullocks, for the garrison. These were confiscated.

At the conference on board one of the insurgents' vessels, after the bombardment of Asuncion, last Wednesday, between the Ministers of Argentina, Brazil, Italy and France and the insurgent leaders, the latter said that after the Ministers left the vessel would fire two more shots, one at the residence of President Encarna and the other at the church concealing a battery, in order to demonstrate the excellence of their artillery.

The shots were fired and both the President's residence and the church were hit.

No further bombardment has been reported.

The insurgent commander with 2,600 land forces is approaching Asuncion.

One of the insurgent steamers has sailed for the Villa Hayes, north of the capital.

The Villa Hayes is the only point which can now be communicated with. Asuncion is completely isolated.

The Foreign Ministers have offered their intervention, to which for the insurgent leaders replied that they would permit President Encarna, to continue in office, but would demand the resignation of the Ministers and other high officials of the Government.

The insurgents' terms were conveyed to the Government officials and promptly declined.

The insurgents then sent an ultimatum demanding the surrender of the capital within twenty-four hours, saying that should this demand be not granted the bombardment of Asuncion would be resumed.

SUFFERING ENDED.

Miss Nell Clark Died Saturday About Noon.

She Succeeded In The Effort To End Her Troubles In Death.

Miss Nell Clark, the pretty Croton girl, who took a fearful dose of corrosive sublimate Tuesday with suicidal intent, lingered until Saturday at 12:30 p. m., when death ended her sufferings. Her physicians held out no hope of her recovery from the first. Her intestines were fearfully burned and hemorrhages showed the hopeless condition resulting from the fiery poison.

She frequently expressed herself as being in no sense sorry for the act taken.

On Friday she began to grow rapidly worse and continued to sink to the end. Her burial took place Sunday and she was laid to rest near the country home she left a few years ago to come to this city. She was 23 years old.

TOBACCO MEN, ORGANIZE.

"Cactus" Writes Again on The Possibilities of the Tobacco Planters.

To the Kentuckian.

If there be a man interested in tobacco, twenty-one years of age, of fair size, and good intellect, who does not know that the price of tobacco has declined without reasonable conditions for such decline, I would invite his perusal of the compiled reports of the Department of Commerce and Labor of the U. S. Government.

These reports indicate that there is no over-production, and that the quality remains practically the same from year to year. We constantly hear reports from parties interested in buying, that there is a surplus, and that the approaching crop as a whole is of inferior quality.

People who are taking a serious view of the situation quickly realize that an important department of the underbuying process is to create a depressed value at the outset among the producers.

A little systematic work of this nature at a wise time for such work might save a great deal of hard work that would otherwise ensue later on.

The price of tobacco is at least a large degree easily within the control of the producer. This is so firmly imbedded in my mind, and having viewed constantly the injury which the planter endures in the loss of money and time, as the result of inaction, and the ordinary thoughtfulness that is necessary to conduct any undertaking to a successful termination, I feel constrained to speak in the strongest language that I can employ of the necessity for immediate action, to combat the encroachment of the great combine.

Can any man gainsay the truth of my assertion—that no cause could be purer and nobler than a firm determination to organize as peaceful, well meaning, charity loving citizens and without any recourse than a friendly, positive, businesslike determination to protect ourselves in the sale of tobacco, our greatest crop.

There is not the slightest occasion even for enmity. Ours can be a smooth, beautiful, bloodless battle without even the loss of a friendship. It is simply do it.

Our cause, our endeavor to get a fair price for our tobacco, will stand a legal and moral test of right, and you know there is a homely old proverb "right maketh might." Our work is so easy of accomplishment, it is simply to get together, surely we have the common sense and manhood to do that.

Farmers do get together on many important matters, and in the strictly agricultural districts, too. For instance, they realize the necessity for reliable peace officers, an honorable judge to preside in the courts. They are not slow to select a good man and support him heartily.

If they can get together on political questions standing man to man and shoulder to shoulder against a common foe, surely they can get together on a broad and most propitious like a fair price for tobacco.

There is a little indescribable jealous suspicion among farmers that it is unworthy of them as applied to each other. They place implicit faith in their physician, whom they have schooled themselves to love and trust. If they get into a lawsuit they select a lawyer, and abide his advice. With a great deal of respect for this lawyer and physician I would say there are farmers who have the common sense business love to make the other farmer trust him implicitly.

Tobacco planters, will you get together, and for business, trust, at a call from the President of the Clarksville District Tobacco Growers' Association? The necessity for immediate organization to protect the sale of the present crop is imperative.

Fresh Air for the Anæmic.

Paleness of the complexion is often one of the signs of anæmia, a complaint from which young girls very often suffer nowadays. For these an indoor life is exceedingly undesirable, and they should be out in the fresh air as much as possible. A course of cod liver oil and iron is beneficial, and the diet should consist of milk, farinaceous foods, etc., and a cold or fever during which the system is causing better circulation to the body. —Washington Star.

Honey in Switzerland.

Beeskeepers are very important people in some parts of the world. Take Switzerland, for example, where honey is a staple article of food, bread and honey being the standard breakfast even among the peasants. The largest hotels there serve it as the principal item of their morning bill of fare. So important is the bee industry in that little country that men are paid to go around from canton to canton teaching the art of beeskeeping.

Culinary Hint.

Housekeepers may be glad to know that instead of lard or bacon rind a turnip cut in half and the griddle thoroughly rubbed with the raw side will answer the purpose of greasing, fry the cakes a nice, rich brown and there will be no sticking and no odor or taste of the turnip. There is no smoke and mess as when lard is used, nor is the nice flavor of the buckwheat destroyed as by the use of grease.—Household.

Before the marriage ceremony Rigo, in the presence of witnesses, was paid $3,000, and signed a paper waiving all claims on the princess.

COOLNESS SAVES A BOY.

Youth, Carried 400 Feet In Air By Balloon, Has Narrow Escape.

Sparta, Wis., Aug. 10.—An aeronaut's coolness today saved a boy from death. Frank Frederick, 15 years old, became entangled in the ropes of an ascending balloon and was carried 400 feet into the air, feet up. Professor H. Henry meanwhile had seized another rope, going up with the boy, whom he warned to hold on tight and not look at the ground. As the balloon settled the aeronaut dropped off, lighting the airship and breaking the boy's fall so that he escaped injury. Several women fainted in the crowd of hundreds which witnessed the ascension.

RUN AWAY

Is Probably What Has Become

of Arthur White.

Told a Friend in July That He Intended to Go to Arkansas.

As.

A representative of the Kentucky discovered an important clue to the probable whereabouts of Arthur White Friday afternoon, which was communicated to the boy's father and given out to the press correspondents. The boy who left his home Sunday, August 7, has in all likelihood gone to Eagle Mills, Ark.

About July 1st, he confided to a young friend named Lily Claxton, whom he met in this city, that he intended to leave home before long. He said his father had in a very large crop of tobacco and that hard work was in prospect for him and that he could do better in Arkansas. A year or two ago a family named Minor from Casey, where the boy lived last year, went to Eagle Mills and one of them, Jim Minor, was back here about June and gave glowing accounts of the money that could be made working in lumber camps at $2 or $3 a day. Young White told Claxton what Minor had said and outlined his plan for getting to Eagle Mills. He said he would probably ride his wheel over towards Clarksville and sell it and get money to buy a ticket.

Eagle Mills is on the Cotton Belt Railroad in Southern Arkansas, about 230 miles southwest of Memphis. A ticket from Clarksville, a distance of about 430 miles, would cost about $13.00. White had a few dollars and he could have sold his bicycle and gone as far as his money would take him. He might have been supplied with money or a ticket on either the I. C. or the L. & N. roads.

Mr. White will make investigation along this line.

A close search was made north of town by a party of Mr. White's friends, but nothing was found to furnish a clue.

Rube Wilson was brought before Judge Fowler Friday afternoon and released for lack of evidence. The negro's stories were so conflicting that they appeared to be without any sort of foundation. The probability is that young White has gone towards Arkansas as far as his money would take him and that he will try to work his way by seeking employment from farmers along the road, until he can make enough to continue his journey.

FINE SHOWING

Made By Hopkinsville Uniform Rank in Parade.

One of the Uniform Rank companies which attracted favorable notice in the parade yesterday was Evergreen, No. 37, of Hopkinsville, Ky., of which Capt. Charles O. Prowse is commander. Although this company has not long been organized, its drill work and marching is equal to that of some of the veteran companies. The company is made up of the leading young men of Hopkinsville, and the creditable manner in which the members have conducted themselves during their stay in Louisville is a source of gratification to their friends.—Times.

The following members of the Hopkinsville company of the uniform rank of Knights of Pythias attended the conclave:

Lieut. E. W. Clark, Lieut. E. B. Courtney, C. M. Hill, H. L. Hayden, L. E. Fowler, T. F. Callard, E. J. Lawlor, C. E. Harris, R. M. Tunks, C. H. Stowe, J. W. Stowe, C. W. Dorr, T. L. Payne, W. M. Terry, Geo. Conell, E. W. Jackson, Max Moayon, S. F. C. McCulloch, L. P. Atkins.

FATAL DOSE.

Of Morphine Swallowed By Myrtle Cunningham.

Myrtle Cunningham, an inmate of a house of ill repute near the cemetery, died Friday morning from an overdose of morphine, taken after a quarrel with a man. One theory is that she took too much of it to quiet nervousness, and another is that it was a case of suicide. The woman was about 20 years old and came from Heclar, in Hopkins county, to which place her body was taken.

Sam Jones Garnished.

As Rev. Sam P. Jones stepped from his carriage Thursday afternoon Deputy Sheriff Johnson served an order of attachment upon him. The order was signed by the Southern Lyceum bureau and was issued from the Jefferson county circuit court for $372.11. The reason for this was not known. When the papers were shown to Mr. Jones he glanced at them and passed on as if it were a matter of no importance. It is said that the alleged debt grew out of the failure of Mr. Jones to keep a date made by the bureau for him.

Those qualities of timeliness and general readableness which characterize Everybody's are well to the fore in the September issue. A capital article on motor boats—the new, swift, high-powered pleasure craft—tells fully of these late toys of the millionaire class. The "Deepest Mine in the World" describes the wonderful copper mines of Michigan. In "The Campaign Snellbinder" Lindsay Denison describes the ways and methods of certain political orators and narrates many diverting stories. There are many diverting short stories, one in verse, by Wallace Irwin, besides the third instalment of Hall Caine's serial, "The Prodigal Son," which is undoubtedly the big novel of the year.

CHARGE OF MURDER

Must Now Be Lodged Against Gip Griffin.

Henry Warner, the old farmer who was shot by Gip Griffin on June 22, near Fruit Hill, died Friday from his wounds. He was shot in the body with a shotgun, a second barrel took effect in his hip and then after clubbing the old man with the butt end of the gun, Griffin fled and made good his escape.

The shooting occurred in Warner's field, where he was at work, after they had had some words about a team, Griffin being a tenant on the farm.

Warner lingered in a suffering condition for two months, but his wounds refused to heal and finally caused his death.

There is a reward of $100 outstanding for Griffin's arrest. Warner was 65 years old.
